The Health Minister's being told to cough up more cash for the Office of the Health and Disability Commissioner.

The agency's forecasting financial deficits until 2015-16 and says it needs additional funding if it's to be financially sustainable.
The HDC did receive three million in extra funding in this year's Budget for a four year period but Labour MP Annette King isn't satisfied.

She says when the Health and Disability Commissioner tells you they're under pressure, facing deficits, then it's up to the Minister to decide it's a priority.

Mrs King says it doesn't seem to be, for Mr Ryall.
